It's crunch time and who you gonna call.....?

Okay, so you've spent months, maybe even years, planning for the one day you're hoping to pull off as the most perfect, beautiful and flawless day of your life... Your Wedding Day!

Oh my gosh, you've done it! You think....

You've spent countless hours shopping for the most glamorous and perfect dress for your occasion, you've envisioned your entrance, you have all 12 bridesmaids together at the same time to try on countless numbers of dresses, addressing every case scenario imaginable (skin color, tattoos, birthing scars, acne, monthly issues) You have picked the reception site and shopped for the most wonderful centerpieces with the perfect candles and the decorations blend to perfection.. The guys are fitted, instructed and warned to be where they should. The organist and vocalist have copies of the music. Your flowers are decided upon, your cake only needs to be baked, decorated and delivered. Your photographer knows exactly what you have in mind and what your time frames are. You have decided on how the chapel will look and what will be where and all that is left to do is show up for your hair and make up appointment and get dressed. But...

Who will be decorating the chapel and reception site? Is there enough time in the 24 hours before the service for all the "things" that need to be done to humanly be accomplished? Who will be sure the vocalist, organist, photographer and videographer are on time? If someone is late, who will rearrange and reorganize to make sure all scheduled times will still flow? Who will check to be sure all the guys are accounted for with proper clothing, shoes, boutonnieres and no unwanted accessories? Who will be sure the bridal party is lined up in order, ready for their cues, not chewing gum and have no cell phones ready to ring at any moment? Who will be prepared for emergencies with water, sewing kits, stain remover, extra pins, mints, smelling salts and ready to answer the 399 questions that will come up in that 24 hours?

Our goal as the "day of" coordinator is that you will know all has gone off without a hitch, actually amazed by how smooth it all went, refreshed and ready to run off on your honeymoon after a day of friends, family and fun. All the while we will need to rest and recover from the work it took in those two days to make it all you dreamed it would be.
